lakeside™

Design: Margaret McCurry, FAIA, ASID, IIDA

Lakeside benches are traditional and pastoral in inspiration, contemporary in form and materials. They share a universal formed steel frame that recalls the front-porch platform swing of another era. The staggered picket version transforms a common backyard staple into uncommon bench seats and backs. Whimsical pickets are offered in natural wood and high-tech PolySite. The grass and leaf versions render motifs from nature in plasma-cut powdercoated sheet steel. The companion Lakeside litter receptacle is a trim cylinder with recessed base, offered in plain or in patterned versions to compliment benches.

mix™

Design: frog design

Mix is a modular system of connected seats and tables designed to create outdoor living spaces in which people can comfortably interact. Unlike conventional outdoor seating that lines people up like birds on a wire, the 120° angle of the curved Mix unit allows two people to converse, side-by-side. Tables, in three shapes, are the "hinges" that give the system its flexibility and unique footprint. Mix supports work and play, individuals and groups, solitary and collaborative activities. Modules can be configured to create a variety of functional settings and to define space in both linear and organic modes.

shade™ + mingle®

Design: frog design

Shade is an umbrella with a butterfly-like form that compliments Mingle and is compatible with other Landscape Forms products as well. Unique in design and construction, its canopy of four interlocking wings is suspended from the top of the pole, rather than supported from beneath by a structural web. Its squared shape allows units to be placed side-by-side to create "waves."

Mingle takes an off-center approach to round tables with attached seating. Its asymmetrical structure is open and inviting, easy to get in and out of, and wheelchair accessible. Like Shade wing panels, Mingle seat and back inserts are offered in polycarbonate, a integrally-colored translucent material that meets the same BIFMA standards as perforated steel.

Mingle®
